Anthropic IPO lures proxy bets from Asia

Access to the IPO will likely be difficult for most Asian investors

Bloomberg
feedback@livemint.com

Anthropic chief executive officer Dario Amodei. Japan and Australia are included in the international portion of the company's IPO. AFP

For much of Asia, getting a piece of Anthropic's blockbuster initial public offering (IPO) may prove nearly impossible. That's pushing investors towards a collection of proxies, from the Claude maker's listed shareholders to crypto derivatives and semiconductor stocks.

The AI firm is set for an equity offering that may value the company at around $1.5 trillion. While Japan and Australia are included in the international portion of the IPO, access will likely be difficult given high demand and various restrictions.

The hunt for indirect exposure is taking investors in several directions. Some are looking to companies with stakes in Anthropic or futures products tied to its valuation, while others are betting on chipmakers and hardware suppliers that could benefit from the AI spending the IPO will help fund.

"It will spill over to chip names," said Hui Ling Loh, managing director at ACG Management Pte. "Such proxies could be effective way to cover Anthropic as many regional and retail investors are inevitably sidelined in Asia."

The biggest Anthropic bet in Asia runs through the region's chip industry. Anthropic's roughly $800 billion compute buildout points to benefits for leading foundry Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Co. as well as memory makers like SK Hynix Inc. and Samsung Electronics Co.

The IPO filing highlights Anthropic's dependence on advanced chips manufactured by TSMC, warning that supply constraints at the Taiwanese supplier are a key concern. SK Hynix and Samsung are also identified in the prospectus as major producers of high-bandwidth memory used in AI computing.

Less obvious trades include SK Telecom Co., whose early investment in Anthropic has grown into a multibillion-dollar holding. The Korean mobile firm also maintains a commercial partnership with the US AI developer.

Commonwealth Bank of Australia offers another route, having purchased a stake in Anthropic more than a year ago. Australia's biggest lender put the value of its holding at more than $1 billion as of the end of June.

NEC Corp. provides a different kind of connection, having become Anthropic's first Japan-based global partner in April. It has since joined the AI developer and eight Japanese financial institutions in initiatives to develop AI applications for the financial industry.

NEC shares are up 45% from their June low, while CBA's stock has risen 8% so far this month. SK Telecom shares have climbed 9% over the past two session, though they're still well off their June peak.

To be sure, it remains to be seen how the market will receive the giant Nasdaq listing, given the wave of recent concerns over funding for costly AI projects and whether they will ever pay off. Moreover, investing in tangential plays introduces risks from unrelated industries as well.

"People are probably better off sticking with Anthropic's suppliers," said Vey-Sern Ling, a managing director at Union Bancaire Privee. "It is a hyped-up IPO of a loss-making company with a very uncertain path to profitability, subject to immense competitive pressures and developmental bottlenecks at the same time."

Beyond direct equity ownership, cryptocurrency exchanges and online trading platforms are already trading bets on Anthropic. In May, OKX introduced Anthropic-linked perpetual futures that carry no expiry date, followed by similar products from Binance in June.

On Hyperliquid's EntropyIO venue, Anthropic-linked perpetual futures implied a valuation of about $1.88 trillion. Platforms including PU Prime have introduced contracts-for-difference products that allow traders to speculate on price changes without holding the underlying asset.

MINT MEDIA MARKETING INITIATIVE

mint The Festive Edge

LEADERS' LENS

As part of Mint's Festive Edge initiative, Leaders' Lens brings together industry perspectives on the consumer shifts, market trends and brand priorities shaping the festive season.

MILAN PARTANI,
Chief Business Officer, Meesho

What is the one shift in how Indians are shopping this festive season that feels meaningfully different from last year?
One of the most interesting shifts this festive season is the rise of discovery-led shopping. Consumers across Bharat are browsing online as they traditionally do offline: exploring, comparing and discovering products. Personalised feeds, recommendations and short-form content are increasingly shaping this journey. On Meesho, over 75% of orders originate from personalised feeds, highlighting discovery's growing role in shopping. Content Commerce further enhances this experience, with creators helping consumers discover products through demonstrations, recommendations and relatable content. Across Bharat, local preferences, languages and familiar creators make discovery more intuitive. The result is an exploratory shopping journey where consumers discover what they want, much like browsing a neighbourhood store, making online shopping more engaging and personalised.

Where does a festive purchase really get decided today - at the showroom, a phone screen, or in a conversation at home?
The phone has become central to festive shopping, with personalised feeds and creators shaping product discovery and consideration. Consumers may open Meesho without a specific product in mind and discover relevant options through personalised feeds. Creators bring products to life, demonstrating their features and everyday use. Over 75% of Meesho orders originate from personalised feeds, while Content Commerce connects discovery directly with commerce. Consumers can explore products, evaluate ratings and reviews, and complete purchases seamlessly.

Where are consumers willing to trade up this festive season and where is value still winning over aspiration?
Consumers are increasingly demanding brands across beauty and personal care, footwear, wellness and electronic accessories, prompting us to build Meesho Mall. With over 1,200 brands, Meesho Mall expands access to branded products across Bharat, offering wider category choices, price points and pack sizes. Aspiration continues to coexist with value consciousness. Consumers may seek specific brands while considering pack sizes, combinations and prices that suit their budgets. Meesho Mall expands brand access while retaining the value and affordability.

In a festive season crowded with offers, screens, scrolls and messages, where can a brand still earn attention?
India's festive shopping landscape reflects Bharat's demand for choice, affordability and convenience, while sellers seek wider markets. Meesho aims to democratise internet commerce by making online shopping and selling accessible nationwide. Through affordable products, personalised discovery and greater selection, its marketplace helps consumers find value while enabling small businesses and manufacturers to reach customers across Bharat, supporting commerce growth beyond the festive season.
